COVER

What do leaves have to do with alumni?

Think of what they have in common:

No two are alike, and, because of their unique locations and positions, each has a different view of the world.

They both provide the sustenance to ensure the quality of their beneficiaries.

They offer their resources to benefit the whole, not themselves.

When new ones come on, we delight in the promise they hold; when old ones drop off, we miss them sorely.

It takes a lot of individual ones to make a patch of shade.

They can never disavow their roots.

Leaf through the pages of this issue and find the names of the good people who, along with you, make it known that UNCG alumni care.

James S. Ferguson

Dr. Ferguson walked a tightrope with balance and integrity

■ By Robert M. Calhoon

James Ferguson had two cats, "Black Cat" and "Cat." Black Cat was his favorite.

Black Cat meowed his way into Dr. Ferguson's affection after being trapped for a week under the Foust Administration Building. A buildings and grounds crew had replaced the crawl space cover through which the cat had begun its explorations.

Working at his desk, Chancellor Ferguson heard the muffled cries of a cat in distress. He investigated, removed the crawl space cover, and saw a black kitten, too weak and terrified to come out. So the chancellor, a tall lanky man, crawled in.

Whenever Dr. Ferguson told a self-deprecating story, his face went solemn, and his eyes twinkled. Black Cat must have noticed this Lincolnesque expression when the two of them met beneath Foust that day. With the discernment into human character which is given to cats, Black Cat attached itself to Dr. Ferguson and for years followed him around campus.

James S. Ferguson was acting chancellor and chancellor of this University for fourteen years, and for nearly four years after he retired from administration he taught in the history department. His knowledge, his love of teaching, and his ability to summon others to a common educational cause embody all that we mean by the term academic excellence.

James Ferguson was born in Anguilla, Mississippi, in 1916 and grew up in a succession of

This essay is adapted from the Honors Convocation address given on May 1, 1990. Dr. Calhoon is a member of the history department and the Residential College. He joined the faculty in 1964 shortly before James Ferguson first became acting chancellor. Dr. Calhoon is collecting material about James Ferguson's career and invites readers with recollections of Dr. Ferguson or responses to this essay to write to him in care of the history department.

Methodist parsonages in small towns in southern Mississippi. He chopped wood for the kitchen stoves of his two aunts in Jackson, Mississippi, while attending Millsaps College in the mid 1930s. He did his graduate work at LSU and Chapel Hill. In 1944 he returned to Millsaps to teach and in 1953 became dean.

There he gravitated to a group of faculty at Millsaps and nearby Tougaloo College, a black school. The group included historian Vernon Wharton and two sociologists, George Maddox at Millsaps and Ernst Borinski at Tougaloo. They regularly brought their students across the color line, and in classes and seminars explored racial justice in the "closed society" of segregated Mississippi.

Borinski, a refugee from Nazi Germany, was the most dynamic figure in the group. He recognized in Ferguson a kindred spirit who like him "knew a social force when he saw one and knew how to make it intelligible to students and associates."

After Little Rock in 1956, the history and sociology of race became dangerous subjects in Mississippi, and Millsaps' president, Ellis Finger, regularly received phone calls denouncing the "communists" on his campus and at Tougaloo. Finger upheld his trustees' opposition to integration but steadfastly defended his faculty's academic freedom against assaults from the White Citizens' Council that "either you and your faculty are for segregation or you are for integration."

Tension mounted to the point of death threats against Ferguson's colleague and friend, George Maddox. As dean, Ferguson asked the Jackson police to protect Maddox, but when the police ignored him, the Maddox children spent several tense nights sleeping at the Ferguson's.

James and Frances Ferguson were liberals on race in academic life before that was fashionable and, in Mississippi, before it was safe. "He was a force for conscience," one student recalls, "just by being there."

"You have to understand," George Maddox explains, "that the Methodist Women's Society for Christian Service" in early twentieth century Mississippi "was the haven for those with an expectation of racial justice; Jimmy, as he was known to his Mississippi friends and family, grew up in that environment." By the early 1960s Ferguson's quiet courage had enraged segregationists in Jackson to the point that they turned the wrath of the community on him, on Frances Ferguson, and finally on their two young daughters.

It was time to leave. His friend, Otis Singletary, now chancellor of the Woman's College in Greensboro, invited Ferguson in 1962 to become the first dean of the Graduate School. In 1967 he succeeded Singletary as chancellor and over the next decade built an outstanding faculty and an excellent library.

Two episodes at UNCG tested his leadership. In April 1969 the cafeteria workers employed by Slater ARA Services went on strike. Mostly black and many of them A & T students, the strikers received the support of the Carolinian and the Student Government Association.

This backing almost at once threatened to splinter along racial, gender, generational, and ideological lines. The students supporting the strike were biracial, but their leadership was white. The strikers included older, more cautious blacks and younger, impatient A & T undergraduates. The A & T student body had just won concessions from Slater on its campus. The students now wanted to test the power of large student demonstrations led by black males on a predominately white female campus. The city police were determined not to let campus demonstrations get out of hand. The University administration could not become a party to the dispute without acquiring financial liability for the settlement.

As chancellor, Ferguson was in a tight position. A spontaneous dining hall demonstration on the second night of the strike, a Saturday, led to a march on the chancellor's residence where one radical student and a hundred or so supporters shouted demands that he impose a settlement.

The following Thursday, a mass meeting of 650 UNCG and A & T students in Cone Ballroom lasting long past midnight almost erupted into a similar march. What the moderate students opposing this tactic and the radical ones demanding it did not know was that a large force of city police had taken up positions on Forest Avenue ready to arrest anyone who marched on the street or trespassed on the chancellor's lawn.

A desperate Randy Bryant, SGA president, persuaded the crowd to wait until morning to confront the chancellor by promising that he would address the student body at 10 am — which he did, manfully, for there was still nothing decisive he could say.

One of the key figures in preventing UNCG from blowing up between Palm Sunday and Easter, 1969, was Henry Frye, now a justice on the North Carolina Supreme Court, and then the lawyer retained by the strikers and the SGA.

The other key figure was Ferguson. On the Thursday night while moderate and radical students debated tactics in Cone Ballroom, and police readied tear gas canisters on Forest Avenue, Ferguson was on the phone to Philadelphia giving Slater's management a short course on race relations in the South and some idea of who Henry Frye was, and why his representation of the strikers was a precious opportunity for Slater and the University to settle the dispute without violence.

The second crisis of his chancellorship occurred in 1973 when a conservative faction in the Student Senate held a late night meeting, suspended the by-laws, excluded interested parties from speaking, and then rammed through a resolution stripping the Neo Black Society of funding — on the grounds that it refused to admit whites, a charge which was, in fact, untrue. Two white students interested in race relations had quietly joined the Society months earlier and had amicably participated in its activities.

NBS President Leon Chestnut and several others woke the chancellor at 2 am to appeal the decision. "He was not hostile at all," Chestnut recalls; "in his pajamas and bathrobe he listened to our concerns" and promised a thorough review.

As that process began the next morning, sixty students from both races sat down on the Foust Administration Building lobby floor in solidarity with the Society and stayed there for four days. Ferguson persuaded the students to scrunch far enough apart to allow small footfalls between their bodies and allow him to rule that the building was not being illegally obstructed. He appointed a faculty committee to review the dispute: Kendon Smith, Franklin Parker, Ernest Griffen, Harriet Kupferer, and Doris McKinney — "among the ablest and most fair-minded people we have," Ferguson told the trustees.

Always the teacher, Ferguson remembered what he and Ernst Borinski had learned in the 1950s, — that a biracial roomful of students is a classroom in the best sense of the term. His flexibility and patience — as well as his final ruling restoring Neo Black Society funding — enabled those students to learn something important about the validity of their own beliefs, the nature of institutions, and the meaning of conflict resolution. Fittingly, it was Professor Joseph Himes, the father of the sociology of conflict resolution, who congratulated

Ferguson on his handling of the crisis.

In both the 1969 strike and the 1973 sit-in, Ferguson faced situations in which police could easily have been drawn onto campus to make arrests involving some degree of force. By preventing that from happening, without jeopardizing the rule of law or sacrificing the interests of the institution, he prevented wounds to the University which would have taken years to heal.

Ferguson's composure and skill in these events was the product of his education. At Millsaps he regularly took his turn teaching the required course in western civilization, and when the return of that course to the arts and sciences curriculum at UNCC hung precariously in the balance in 1979, he quietly but effectively encouraged the change. He knew that the western intellectual tradition of history and philosophy, rationalism and skepticism were disciplines against easy answers and the fashionable ideas of the moment.

When he returned to North Carolina in the 1960s, Ferguson brought progressive sympathies and theological assumptions about evil and redemption to bear on the meaning of educational expansion in the Tar Heel state. The North Carolina Populists and their Republican allies during the early 1890s, he explained, demanded school for all children. An educational reformer like Charles Duncan McIver knew that agrarian discontent represented a moment to be seized in developing his new Normal College for women near the spring gardens in west Greensboro.

Charles Aycock and conservative Democrats rode back to power in the 1898 and 1900 elections with a virulent campaign to segregate the races and expand public education. It took racism and commitment to education to ensure enough votes to get the Populists and the Republicans out of power.

Ferguson believed that this University — owing its existence to the best and the worst in North Carolina's political culture — had in the 1960s and 1970s a short time to help redeem education in North Carolina by bringing wholeness, dignity, and inclusiveness to the men and women who came to study here.

As chancellor he often quoted the anthropologist Ralph Linton on the gap between “declared behavior” and “manifest behavior” in the life of every society. It was a gap people in the 1960s were demanding to have closed, a demand to which universities had to respond. Ferguson knew that his credibility with students in the 1960s and at times the actual safety of the University depended on his ability to articulate the difference between ideals and realities.

It was an urgent James Ferguson who told one North Carolina academic audience in 1967 the story “of how the nephews of Thomas Jefferson in a drunken spree heinously chopped a Negro slave into little bits because of their anger over his dropping and breaking a water pitcher, heirloom though it was.” This episode symbolized what he called “the division within the soul of America” which was for Ferguson a personal void which he worked for a lifetime to repair with teaching, knowledge, kindness, and integrity.

“What better goal could an emerging South define for itself,” he asked a meeting of southern leaders in 1969, “than the encouragement and promotion of a society that values the personalism and the dignity of the individual?”

Looking back on his parents' generation, he made his own pact between what he inherited and what he hoped to bequeath. “During the first third of this century ... men oversimplified the matter of applying reason to the solution of man's problems,” he told a Georgia audience in 1969, “but it is in the human capacity for rationality that our chief hope lies. We cannot be faint of heart. The fact that our task is more complex than we first thought should not cause us to turn our backs on rationality. ... No matter how conflicting they may be, the emotional urgings of men ... can lead as easily to delusion as well as reality. ... Of course, emotions have added fine qualities to life, but the fundamental question is whether we control these urgings or are controlled by them. Education seeks to develop men and women in whom the former is true.”

Spoken in troubled times, Ferguson's words sustained disciplined learning in this University two decades ago, as did his practice of conflict resolution. In September 1978, in his last report to the trustees, he looked to the future: “It is time to move into another phase of the history of this stalwart institution, to turn to a new leader, and to experience the new bursts of energy and interest and vision that accompany such change.”

It was an accurate prediction. The University's growing reputation for academic excellence during the 1980s owed much to the faculty, library, and curriculum which were the legacy of the Ferguson era.

Because of you . . .

Good things are happening at UNCG.

■ By Ann Phillips McCracken '60

Last May I attended my thirtieth class reunion at UNCG, and I was delighted to see so many from the Class of 1960. We had a great time on Friday and Saturday, and I commend the Alumni Office and our class reunion planning committee for making this time at UNCG so special for us. (I loved the class T-shirt!) I trust all of you in the other reunion classes had the same happy experience.

For many reasons, this reunion was especially memorable for me, but I sensed a bond among my classmates that I perhaps had not recognized before. I think the passing of thirty years made this reunion a time for reflection as well as fun, for recognizing that our being at UNCG (then the Woman's College) in the late 1950s helped us to be better prepared for the challenges of a world that would drastically change. Perhaps we were even responsible for some of those changes!

In later messages I hope I will be able to share my feelings of pride in our own and each other's accomplishments, of liking who and what we have become, and of appreciating more than ever our unique college experience.

This time, however, I invite you to recognize the names of all the Alumni Association members — those who share your devotion and loyalty to UNCG. Your support is very important in maintaining the prominence of the University and enhancing its potential. Thank you very much for your gifts.

I hope your involvement with UNCG and with the Alumni Association will not stop with your financial gifts. Your contribution automatically makes you a member of the Alumni Association. The Trustees of the Alumni Association and the staff of the Alumni Office are eager for you to participate in as many activities as possible that are planned for alumni, both on and off campus. The Alumni Association is one of your most important links to the University of which you are forever a part, and I encourage all of you to become even more active. Your enthusiasm, your support, and your interest and concern can only make a stronger Alumni Association, and, consequently, a stronger University.

The Board and I have a charge from immediate past president Betty Crawford Ervin '50 and others to see that the Association continues to meet its obligations to alumni while guarding its integrity. With your support, we look forward to making the Alumni Association even more responsive to the needs of alumni and to the greater good of The University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Ann Phillips McCracken '60 began her term as president of the Alumni Association last June.

The Blue Valleys

has a durable glow

■ By Fred Chappell

The Blue Valleys, a durable collection of short stories, marks the first excursion into fiction for Robert Morgan '68 MFA. Morgan for some time has been recognized as one of the nation's outstanding poets, and such volumes as At the Edge of the Orchard Country, Bronze Age, and Groundwork enjoy enviable status among critics and poets alike.

He brings some of his gifts as a poet to bear upon the art of his fiction. We find here close observation of deftly chosen detail, absolute authenticity in treatment of the western North Carolina background, and a gracefulness of sentence structure that delight even jaded senses. But his stories have some of the best assets of fiction, too. The author keeps his eye trained on his story lines; nothing is added for the sake of ornament, and there is little play of language for its own sake. Strength and simplicity — these are the hallmarks of The Blue Valleys.

Taken together, the thirteen stories here make up a loose chronicle of the history of the region. "A Brightness New and Welcoming," the opening story, tells of the death of a Confederate soldier and how his place is taken by a comrade in arms. Then come stories of illness and natural disaster, of political struggle and labor unrest, of youth and old age, of brave men and fools. The characters here are always recognizably Appalachian; they are firmly attached to a rich historical tradition. But they are never mere types; each of them is strongly individual, a personality with human quirks and foibles and glories.

There is tenderness in the stories as well as violence. Some awkward and dangerous tasks are undertaken by the characters in order to alleviate the suffering of others or to try to insure their survival. Yet this selflessness is always tacit; it is never spoken of because it is thought as being ordinary necessity rather than colorful gallantry.

The stories Robert Morgan tells are sometimes painful, but their clean economy makes them absorbing. They carry us along relentlessly with their bitter unsparing energies. This quality is enough, and more than enough, to make The Blue Valleys an engaging book.

And every now and then the brilliance of the writing comes to the fore — as in this passage from "The Lost State of Franklin": "When she and Doug were dating they used to drive in his daddy's pickup up on Pinnacle and park. On a clear night the lights of Hendersonville seemed close, almost at their feet if they stood on the big rock on the north side. . . . Those were the times she remembered most from their courtship. If it was summer and they had worked in the fields, she had the glow of sunburn on her showered skin. In the cool night air her body sent out a kind of light. . . ."

And so too with The Blue Valleys. It sends out a kind of light.

ON CAMPUS

Skip Moore Joins Development and University Relations Staff

Skip Moore and Brenda Cooper

On August 1, Dr. Richard L. Moore put on the hat of Acting Vice Chancellor for Development and University Relations, a hat worn by Ms. Audrey Stone for the past year. Dr. Moore, who prefers to be called "Skip" by friends and strangers alike, has held the position of Vice Chancellor for Administration and Planning since 1986; he will continue to serve in that capacity as he takes on his new duties in Development and University Relations. Ms. Stone has been named Assistant Vice Chancellor for Development.

"I'm really looking forward to being involved in the University's alumni, university relations, and development programs," Skip told Alumni News soon after his appointment. "UNCG is a strong institution with an important heritage and a bright future. Teaching has always been important here, and that value remains. Instilling the idea of service in our students is still important. At the same time, graduate education distinguishes UNCG from other schools in the system, placing us in league with Chapel Hill and NC State. An expanding research program enhances teaching and nourishes friendships between the University and the region it serves.

"One of my priorities will be to strengthen the bond between the University, the Alumni Association, and the alumni body so that we will begin our Centennial year united and determined that UNCG will remain one of the top schools in North Carolina. To that end, I will work with the officers and Board of Trustees of the Alumni Association to develop programs and activities and to involve alumni in the work of the University.

"During the next several months I hope to meet alumni across the country at various activities. I also hope that alumni will feel free to drop by my office in the Alumni House whenever convenient."

Summer Research Institute

A dozen UNCG faculty members from the areas of cognitive development, psychobiology, the neurosciences, motor development, and child development were mentors to twenty minority undergraduate students from across the nation who took part in UNCG's second Human Development Research Institute last summer. Funded by a grant from the U.S. Department of Education, the multidisciplinary program of scientific research and scholarly activity introduced the students to graduate-level research in human development.

"As full members of a research team, the students experienced the value of collaboration among researchers of diverse academic backgrounds," said Dr. Anne Steele, coordinator of the Institute. "The need for such programs is great," Dr. Steele continued. "Minority students should be encouraged to seek the post-baccalaureate study that can serve as a stepping stone to career levels from which national prominence can be attained."

A recent National Research Council report stated that of the 22,283 U.S. citizens who received doctoral degrees in 1987, only 3.3 percent were black, 2.7 percent were Hispanic, and less than 1 percent were Native American.

Ground Breaking

The ground breaking for the $7.9 million Student Recreation Facility on Walker Avenue was held September 10. Featured speaker was Dr. Leroy Walker, chancellor emeritus of North Carolina Central University and former head coach of the U.S. Olympic Track and Field Team. The building will house two gymnasiums, an indoor jogging track, six racquetball courts, an exercise and weight training room, an aerobic/fitness area, locker rooms and sauna, and an outdoor recreation check-out and leisure resource center.

Good Stuff

To endear our current students — our future alumni — the Alumni Association gave each one a special gift welcoming them to the University. This fall, as they do every fall, the Association presented "Good Stuff" boxes on the day the students moved into the residence halls. Each contained a collection of personal items, such as shampoo, razors, toothpaste, and hand cream, along with coupons for future purchases. A message from the Association was tucked into each box.

The project is co-sponsored by the Office of Residence Life. All the "goodies" in the box are provided by the product manufacturers.

The students seem to appreciate their "Good Stuff" boxes, and, we hope, learn that "UNCG Alumni Care."

A classroom dances

In Dr. DeRosa's mind

■ By Kay E. Bennett '92

Someday I fully intend to be back in the classroom," said Donald V. DeRosa, the new vice chancellor for academic affairs at UNCG.

That may sound strange coming from the person who was recently chosen over 163 other applicants to be the chief academic officer at the University. However, Dr. DeRosa doesn't plan to leave his office in Mossman for the classroom just yet. "There's a good deal in front of us."

The classroom is in the distant future he said as he sat in his new office one hot afternoon in June.

The only clue to the heat and humidity outside was the bright sunshine streaming through two windows. Bookcases, both full, stood beside each window. His desk was between the bookcases. Important-looking folders rested tidily on the desktop.

Dr. DeRosa didn't sit at his desk, but in a beautiful green Queen Anne chair. A novice reporter sat on a couch facing him with a yellow legal pad perched on her knees and a tape recorder clutched in her hand. Dr. DeRosa succeeded in doing almost the impossible — he put the student at ease with a warm, encouraging smile.

"I love this university," Dr. DeRosa said as he leaned forward slightly in his chair. "I've just been delighted by the quality of what's here already and the opportunity to build on that.

"Every university today should work to ensure quality," he said as he began to explain some of the new programs he plans. "We're examining the strength and quality of our programs in the sciences, ranging all the way from the undergraduate programs to the graduate programs."

In his previous position as dean of the Graduate School and associate vice chancellor for research, Dr. DeRosa established an ongoing system of graduate program reviews. The new system pinpoints problem areas in graduate and undergraduate programs.

Dr. DeRosa said work is under way to strengthen international programs as well. "We're looking to bringing these programs together, perhaps, under one umbrella ... doing something here that we haven't done in the past, and others have not done as well."

Recruitment of outstanding faculty and students is a big priority. "The faculty are really the key to the quality of this institution," he said. "We've had a marvelous tradition of fine faculty dating back to the days of the Woman's College. So, I would imagine that these folks we bring on board will have a good deal to do with how well we do in the future."

He said emphasis will be placed on the recruitment of minority faculty. "It's a national problem ... we have to work on that. We're doing things on our own campus right now to address it. The chancellor has put together four groups to come up with an operating plan to put in place the recommendations the Ad hoc Committee on Minority Affairs gave us about a year ago."

Recruitment of minority students is also a focus. "We do not have presently a large enough proportion of undergraduate and graduate students that are minorities. And, that's something we have to address," Dr. DeRosa said.

One successful effort in this area is the Patricia Roberts Harris Fellowship Program. He recalled how he and Dr. Anne Steele, the new associate vice chancellor for academic affairs, put together the grant proposal in just two weeks. For the past four years, the fellowships have supported women and minority students in pursuit of doctoral degrees.

Another successful effort aimed at minority students is the Human Development Research Institute, which he credits Dr. Steele for putting together. "Two years ago, I saw an announcement about a grant opportunity to support minority students who might have an interest in going on to graduate school.

"I pointed out this grant opportunity to her. We were two weeks away from our deadline for the Patricia Roberts Harris — she had that in front of her. She took this, looked at it, and came up with this marvelous idea, this Human Development Research Institute.

"We are now in our second year of this program ... which allows us to bring twenty of the most outstanding minority students in this country to work with our faculty. And, let me tell you, these students are just splendid."

Dr. DeRosa generously spreads around the credit for accomplishments. "Much of the success I've enjoyed is really due to other people." He mentioned Chancellor Moran, Betsy Brown, and Dr. Stephen M. Mosier, director of the Office of Research Services.

Dr. DeRosa is pleased with the development of the Office of Research Services. In 1985-86, the faculty received $1.8 million from outside sources. In 1989-90, as a direct result of faculty efforts and support in the Office of Research Services, the awards received by faculty totalled $4.6 million.

When he joined UNCG, Dr. DeRosa had been chairman of the department of psychology at Bowling Green State University in Ohio and an American Council on Education Fellow at the University of California at San Diego. He received his MA and PhD degrees from Kent State University and his undergraduate degree from American International College.

Dr. DeRosa said that although he would like one day to continue the research on human memory that he once did, he's pleased with his new position. "It's very draining and very time consuming, but, hey, it's fun."

Dr. DeRosa and his wife, Karen, have four children. A daughter, Lauren, is a sophomore at UNCG.

"I've grown so fond of this university — the students, the faculty, the staff," Dr. DeRosa said. "I've just been delighted. I hope I'll be able to work here for some time."

This student hopes so, too, Dr. DeRosa.

PLAY BALL!

By Mike Gaski '77 MFA

Major college baseball will begin at The University of North Carolina at Greensboro in the fall of 1990 with the arrival of our first recruited class of student-athletes.

In many ways our baseball program began last fall when we began scheduling, recruiting, and making general preparations for practice and game facilities. We have reached an agreement in principle with the City of Greensboro and the professional baseball club, the Greensboro Hornets, to play our spring schedule of games in beautiful War Memorial Stadium until the campus baseball stadium is completed in the near future.

UNCG's baseball team steps up to bat

Our own stadium will allow us greater flexibility in our game and practice schedules and thereby reduce some of the extraneous demands placed on our student-athletes. The stadium will also enable our University to become a center for baseball in the community and, eventually, the state. And through my involvement with the United States Baseball Federation, the Confederation of Pan American Baseball, and the International Baseball Association, we will have amateur teams from throughout the world visit our University on a cultural exchange basis and thereby serve some of our broader educational goals. We arranged for the national teams of Korea, Taiwan, and Canada to play Team USA in War Memorial Stadium in May.

But the stadium is only a place.

More importantly, with our baseball program we hope to enhance the name and image of our University in the city, state, and country, while simultaneously providing increased social and recreational viewing opportunities to University students, staff, and faculty.

For the young men who will be our players, their mission is first and foremost an education. Yet, we cannot lose sight of the fact that they are special people, with special skills, who will develop a strong following with their fierce loyalty to UNCG.

Baseball has always been America's favorite sport. Americans appreciate and know the game perhaps better than any other people who play it. Still, there is great irony in its popularity because to play the game — to play the game well — takes incredible skill, and eventually that demand chases us off the field.

Observe how many hundreds of thousands of children fill their summers with diving catches, extra-base hits, and head-first slides. Then note how dramatically this participation declines as the children get older and the skill level required to play the game makes greater and greater demands on their inherent abilities.

By the age of eighteen, very few of those original little leaguers are still playing organized baseball, and even fewer will go on to play more.

What our fans will see in major college baseball are some of the finest baseball teams and athletes in North Carolina competing against each other. They will see young men who are dedicated to their educational goals moving yet a little closer to professional baseball careers. These are University student-athletes who know how remote their chances are to play beyond college but who still chase the dream we all had during those summer days of diving catches, head-first slides, and extra-base hits.

Mike Gaski is head baseball coach at UNCG. He is one of the very few baseball coaches in the United States with a master's degree in creative writing.

Send-Off Parties!

Charlotte alumni hosted a Send-Off Party for Mecklenburg County students just before school opened.

Remember how apprehensive you felt during the summer before you left for college?

Alumni in several locales tried to ease some of that anxiety by inviting freshmen as special guests to a "Send-Off Party."

The longest-standing tradition of send-off parties is in Sampson County, where alumni invite UNCG students from their area to a cook-out. This year's party featured hot dogs and all the trimmings. Returning students were invited along with freshmen and transfers.

If you'd like to organize a Send-Off Party in your city or county next year, call the Alumni Office for assistance.

Sesquicentennial

The Library Committee of the Centennial Planning Board invites your suggestions for inclusions in the 150th Anniversary Box — a time capsule to be opened in the year 2042.

Thoughtfully, the 50th anniversary celebrants left a box for us to open at the Centennial Celebration coming up next year. But what should we leave for the Sesquicentennial?

Final Calls on Alumni Directory

The telephone verification phase of our alumni directory project is almost complete. Representatives from the Bernard C. Harris Publishing Company are calling alumni to verify information. This is your last opportunity to make changes in your entry in the Centennial Edition of the Alumni Directory.

We are publishing only enough directories to cover prepublication orders. When a Harris representative calls to verify your entry, you will have an opportunity to reserve a copy of the Alumni Directory. This will be your only chance to purchase the book.

Summer Self-Enrichment Series

For five Monday evenings in June and July, alumni and friends gathered in the Virginia Dare Room of the Alumni House for the Alumni Association's first-ever Summer Self-Enrichment Series. Co-sponsored by the Office of Continuing Education, the sessions were all conducted by UNCG alumni "experts."

"Mentally Healthy American Adults" was the topic led by Ruth Crowder McSwain '45. A well-known speaker and retired counselor, Ruth spoke with humor and insight in dealing with interpersonal relationships, self-acceptance, self-fulfillment, and stress management.

Jon Obermeyer '85, a book reviewer for the Greensboro News and Record, led a session entitled, "Books, Books, Books — A Look at Summer Reading." Highlighting Southern writers, Jon gave alumni plenty of ideas for a fine summer reading list.

Raleigh attorney Jay Butler '79 conducted "A Wills Clinic" for the third session in the series. Jay addressed such issues as reasons for having a will, how to have a will correctly drawn, legal terms and what they mean, what is controlled by a will, and when and how to change a will.

Bronna Willis '61, a trust administrator in Lynchburg, VA, followed up with her "Financial Planning Workshop." She explored asset determination, gifts to charities, taxwise planning, what to look for in investments, as well as a broad look at personal financial planning.

The last session in the series was led by Susan Allen '73, president of Allen Resource Group in Durham. In "Humor as a Conscious Strategy," Susan discussed how humor in the workplace leads to harmony, creativity, and improved morale and productivity. Susan's message was taken from Romain Gray, a French playwright: "Humor is an affirmation of dignity; our declaration of superiority over all that befalls us." Her session concentrated on methods that can increase enthusiasm within an organization and in one's personal life.

The Self-Enrichment Series was so well received by alumni that another series was offered this fall. Keep your eye out for future self-enrichment programs which may give you a chance to be a better you.

Friday at Five

August 24 was UNCG alumni night at Friday at Five, a gathering sponsored by the Young Alumni Council, Old Greensborough, and The Downtowners. Pizza and a live band were featured, with proceeds benefiting a revitalization project for Greensboro's oldest downtown area. More than fifty alumni volunteers sold tickets, served beverages, and welcomed the crowd of hundreds.

IT'S HAPPENING AT UNCG

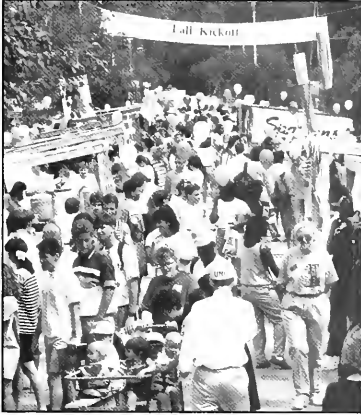

1. Both the men's and the women's soccer teams were ranked No. 1 nationally in NCAA Division II at press time. Jason Haupt (#9) is the men's all-time leading scorer.

2. Thousands of students turned out for Fall Kickoff, a festival that opens the academic year. Bands, booths, games, giveaways, and a hot air balloon graced the grounds along College Avenue.

3. Eleanor Dare Taylor Kennedy '45 saved the Log Cabin from the wrecker's ball this summer. She and her family bought the cabin and moved it to a lot on Walker Avenue. Ground has been broken on its former site for the Student Recreation Facility.

4. Sara Sutton and Patrick Dukeman performed in Stephen Sondheim's A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum. The musical comedy opened UNCG Theatre's 1990-91 season.

A Helping Hand

Kay Ellis '67 attended two White House events in 1989. In the photograph above First Lady Barbara Bush greets Kay at a reception celebrating the release of Go For It, a book on sports and recreation for people with disabilities. A program analyst with the National Park Service in Washington, DC, and a nationally recognized authority in the field of accessibility in recreation, Kay helped edit the book.

Kay also attended a presentation by Vice President Dan Quayle of a scale model of Washington's Capitol Hill, the Mall, and the monument area to the Under Secretary of the U.S. Department of the Interior. The model is part of the Tactile Capital Project with which she assisted. It helps the visually impaired and other disabled visitors better understand the historic sites of the nation's capital.

For the past eight years Kay, who has a master's degree in therapeutic recreation from George Washington University, has worked with the Special Programs and Populations Branch of the National Park Service. She coordinates accessibility efforts in the 350 national parks and provides innovative training and technical assistance to other federal and state agencies as well.

"I feel fortunate to be with the National Park Service and to be among the leaders in guaranteeing our disabled populace their right to accessibility in recreation areas," said Kay. "The civil right of a disabled person to the highest quality of life possible is our goal."

120 Hours = 10 Seconds

If you've ever seen the California raisin commercial, you've seen clay animation. Claymation, for short, is the technique of photographing small clay figures and creating the illusion of movement.

Using this medium Michael Frierson '75 ('80 MA) and his wife, Martha Garrett, have created an orange mother kangaroo and her big blue baby who are appearing on the Nickelodeon Cable Network. In the spot, which is aired during commercial breaks and identifies the daytime programming aimed at young children, the mother pulls strange items out of her pouch along with her baby, who holds a rattle that says "Nick Jr."

Michael and Martha divide the claymation work. He directs and runs the camera, and she designs and paints the characters and sets. The movement is timed with the sound track — in the Nick Jr. spots it's all bongs, whangs, honks, and their daughter, Georgia's, "goo goo." It takes roughly an hour of shooting for each second of film. The ten second project took about 120 hours to complete. Their previous credits include The Children's Television Workshop and the Fund for the Improvement of Post-Secondary Education.

After receiving his PhD from the University of Michigan, Michael taught at Loyola University in New Orleans. But Greensboro is home, and he returned to UNCC to teach film theory, filmmaking, and the history of animation in the broadcasting/cinema division of the Department of Communication and Theatre.

ALUMNI BUSINESS

"To become an [alumnus] is simply to advance into the next class. The [Alumni] Association is that 'next class.' We no longer think that Graduation Day brings us to the edge of a chasm which forever divides us from our College, from its interests and activities, and from participation in them. The [Alumni] Association is the bridge across the break. ...Will you, because to do so is a privilege as well as duty, an opportunity as well as a responsibility, enter into partnership with Our College, take your place joyfully in the association of [alumni] and when the call to service comes, as it does and will, for the work to be done is great, answer gladly? We extend an invitation now."

These were the parting words of Alumnae Secretary Clara Byrd to the graduating class of 1935 as recorded in the Pine Needles for that year. Fifty-five years later, the opportunity to remain involved with our University is still here. The invitation stands, and I want to offer you some specific opportunities for involvement. A few of these are drawn directly from Miss Byrd's messages to the seniors in 1935.

1 Let the Alumni Office know when you change your address (or your name). Keeping up with 55,000-plus alumni is a big job, but you can help by letting us know where you are.

2 Send us your news so we can share it with your classmates: Marriage, job change, career moves, additions to your family, retirement, honors. Mileposts in your life are important to us, too.

3 Send us clippings you see about other UNCG alumni. Share with us what you read about another alumnus. You may be our only means of receiving this information.

4 Talk about our University. Tell the world you love it! Alumni are the best press agents any University can have.

5 Interest the best students you know in attending our alma mater. Let the UNCG Admissions Office know about them so they can be contacted by the University.

6 Remain a member of the Alumni Association — your contribution to the University is needed now more than ever. Through your membership you receive the Alumni News, the official publication of the Alumni Association. It will keep you informed about current happenings at the University, about what your classmates and college friends are doing. Again to quote Miss Byrd, "It will be your letter from home."

7 Read your mail from the University! When you receive a letter, brochure, or publication from the University or the Alumni Association don't discard it as "junk mail." Your Alumni Office and other University departments spend a great deal of time and effort to prepare communications designed to keep you abreast of events on campus and in your area. Failing to give the correspondence at least a moment of your attention will waste the time and effort used to prepare it and your contribution and tax dollars used to print and post it. And, you may deprive yourself of an opportunity to participate in a rewarding and enjoyable event which has been planned with you in mind.

Being beyond a distant horizon does not mean you are out of touch with the University. Where you go, it goes. Where its learning extends, its ideals are cherished. Where its alumni are found, there you may feel valued and welcome. We at your college home look forward to hearing from you.

Brenda Meadows Cooper '65
Alumni Secretary
Acting Director of Alumni Affairs

Planning for their Fiftieth

The Class of 1941 began meeting last July 24 to make plans for their fiftieth reunion next May. Everlasting President Buzz Falls Heisler and Reunion Committee Co-Chairs Helen Fondren Lingle and Mildred Younts pulled together a lively bunch of classmates for a planning luncheon that turned out to be a day-long affair. Among the class members present were, from Greensboro: Sarah Fleet Jones, Bettie Rosa Williams, Mary Miller, Bobbie Clegg Minton, Elizabeth Booker, Mildred Younts, Grace McCraw Evans, Frances Cooke Neal, and Marguerite Murphy Stentz; from other North Carolina cities: Elsie Niemi (Winston-Salem), Frances Scott Bivins (Charlotte), Lucile Griffin Leonard (Lexington), Marjorie Williams Harris (Burlington), Carolyn Willis Cunningham (Raleigh), Mary McQueen Currie (High Point), and Joyce Safrit Moore (Reidsville); and all the way from Florida: Buzz Falls Heisler (Indian Harbor Beach) and Helen Fondren Lingle (Osprey).

Charter Day 1991

Although we will not begin celebrating our Centennial until October 1991, a milestone event in February cannot pass without commemoration.

The State Normal and Industrial School, now UNCG, was chartered by act of the North Carolina legislature on February 18, 1891. One hundred years and one day later, alumni will celebrate in Raleigh where a bill will be introduced in the General Assembly to recognize the University's Charter Day.

Alumni from each county in the state are expected to represent UNCG in Raleigh on February 19, 1991. (The legislative calendar causes the one-day delay of Charter Day.) Those coming from points west will be invited to board the Carolinian, the piedmont's revived train line. From the east, a caravan of buses will transport alumni to the state capital.

Both will arrive in time for lunch in Raleigh before the legislature convenes in the afternoon.

More information will be mailed to you soon. In the meantime, keep your calendar clear for Tuesday, February 19, 1991.
